C. Quarterly Report to the Board – School Improvement Specialists

Dr. Phillip Clark addressed the board on behalf of the three school improvement specialists who are assigned to assist the staffs at Cloverdale, Watson, Chicot, Dunbar and J. A. Fair. To date, they have conducted approximately 100 classroom observations and have attended leadership team meetings and professional development workshops. The specialists are conducting classroom audits and assisting in the development of strategies to improve student achievement. They are encouraging the building administrators and classroom leaders to apply their skills to provide collaboration, implementation of strategies, and use of data to guide instruction.

He reviewed several areas of concern including the finding that at three of the five schools the teachers and administrators work in isolation, with administrators having little or no connection with the instructional functions in the classroom.

Dr. Clark reported that curriculum and support programs have been reviewed and instructional facilitators have found adequate resources to address academic needs. However, these resources are not always utilized to their fullest extent or have not been implemented appropriately. It was recommended that the administration and teachers be appropriately trained in the research strategies that work for their student bodies and that classroom planning be based on principles of higher level thinking skills or Bloom’s taxonomy.

The specialists recommended professional development for classroom teachers and other support personnel in the use of data, including the collection of data and data-driven instructional strategies.

Dr. Clark’s final remarks were geared toward the need for a greater commitment and personal transformation on the part of everyone in the schools. He noted the existence of low morale in some schools and among some teachers. This manifests as a lack of commitment and affects student learning, contributing to a negative school climate or poor public perception. The specialists suggested more celebration of success and the creation of a culture of high performance. He commended the many effective and hard working teachers who do set expectations of positive results.

Dr. Clark responded to questions from the board and reported that the specialists will continue to meet monthly with the superintendent and cabinet and will bring their recommendations to the board on a quarterly schedule.
D. Update: Educational Services / Special Needs, K-12

Jeanne Huddle introduced Renee Dawson, curriculum specialist, who provides professional development to special programs department staff and participates in curriculum development activities and implementation of support programs for special needs instruction.

Ms. Dawson reported that it was a priority to increase achievement in literacy and math achievement in special needs classrooms. She assists special programs in development of accommodation plans aligned with the curriculum maps and provides research based strategies for improving instruction. Ms. Dawson reported that she is visiting middle and high school classrooms this semester, providing professional development for teachers based on her observations, and modeling instruction to classroom teachers who need assistance.

E. Update: LRSD Science K-12

Dennis Glasgow provided an update on the district’s K-12 science programs. He demonstrated a few elementary level science projects and reviewed the process for creating “science kits” for classroom teachers’ use. These kits are created by science department staff at a warehouse at Metropolitan. They are sent to the elementary classroom teachers, used for instruction at the appropriate grade levels, and then returned to Metro for refurbishing. Secondary schools have requested and expect to receive stimulus funds for upgrading equipment in the science labs including new microscopes, probe ware, white boards, centrifuges and other items required for instruction.

Mr. Glasgow introduced Jennifer Webb, a science specialist who provides professional development and instructional support to the district’s teachers. In addition to instruction provided at the district level, teachers are kept updated on opportunities outside the regular school year, including the summer science institute at UALR, Pre-AP certification programs, virtual field trips, science fairs, and the Exxon Mobile Michelson Academy. It was noted that The Learning Institute has provided access to SOAR exams in science which are aligned to the curriculum for elementary students.

F. Report: Synopsis of Districtwide School Improvement Plan

Leon Adams provided an oral report on the district wide Title I school improvement plan and responded to questions from the board. The complete report was not available at the time of posting the board’s agenda, but was to be sent with the board’s Friday update following the meeting.
